Violence is grim offshoot of subway fare evasion

Turnstile justice.

More than 70 people per day have been arrested for jumping the turnstile in 2014.

Every weekday, an average 5.5 million New Yorkers ride one of 21 subway routes. Another 2.6 million use the 305 bus routes around the five boroughs.

And while the sounds of swiping cards and the clunks of the turnstile gears are routine for most city straphangers, a handful of riders continue to skip that daily transaction.

Every year, the New York Police Department reports thousands of fare evasions between both the subway and bus system across the city.

For officials, the immediate issue is the $2.50 the city is shorted with every fare jump. The bigger problem is what happens when those small infractions grow into bigger ones.

"We have proven time and again that those who evade lawful payment of the fare show a high propensity for committing other crimes within the transit system," said NYPD Transit Chief Bureau Joseph Fox.

As of late March, police arrested 7,127 individuals for fare evasion within the subway system in 2014 — a 2.3 percent drop from this time last year.

Theft of service

By March 2013, cops had already arrested 7,296 fare evaders for "theft of service."

- By the end of last year, more than 28,000 people were arrested for jumping turnstiles.

- In all, subway fare evasions made up slightly more than half the 51,327 total arrests by the city's transit police bureau.

- Buses also have seen their share of fare evaders. This time last year, the NYPD said it arrested 87 riders attempting to skip the bus lines. In the last three months, cops have made 209 evasion arrests on buses.

Escalation

"If we could address the issue of someone merely not paying their fare, we might not have to see any escalation of incidents."

Debi Rose

Last week, Officer Karl Kautzsch caught a 16-year-old male who dodged the fare at Aqueduct Racetrack station. The teen punched the officer in the face.

Earlier in March, another transit bureau officer stopped a couple after they jumped the turnstile at the Parkchester subway stop in the Bronx. The male suspect allegedly punched the officer while the woman reportedly jumped on his back and knocked the officer to the floor.

In late February, rookie NYPD Officer James Li was shot in his leg after he attempted to stop two men from jumping on a bus.

The accused shooter, Rashun Robinson, was caught and was found to have an out-of-state warrant for selling drugs.

"When I was chief of police [the first time], we began to focus on fare evasion," NYPD Police Commissioner William Bratton told reporters after the young officer was shot in the leg. "And what did we find? One out of every seven people were wanted on a warrant."

City Councilwoman Debi Rose, of Staten Island, has introduced a bill that would track fare evasion arrests and summonses by subway and bus lines.

Rose explained that the information the bill requires is vital to make public transit safer and reduce fare evasions, which the MTA estimated in 2012 cost the agency around $100 million in revenue.

"It's about transparency," Rose added. "We need to know what we're dealing with so we can better come up with solutions."

Schools to add 4,200 pre-K seats

Mayor Bill de Blasio sat in front of an afternoon prekindergarten class at P.S. 239 in Ridgewood, Queens, hunching over to hear children describe the life cycle of a caterpillar.

"This is a very smart group here," the mayor said on Wednesday, after one 4-year-old explained the necessity for cocoons.

Bill de Blasio / OFFICE OF THE MAYOR

De Blasio quizzed the kids while reading them "The Very Hungry Caterpillar," and received delighted, shouted answers.

Soon, the mayor later announced, more children will have access to pre-K classes in city public schools. With funding secured in the state budget, officials said Wednesday that city schools will add more than 4,200 full-day prekindergarten seats for the fall.

Parents can already apply for the seats, which span 140 schools in the five boroughs.

Only about 20,000 kids are currently enrolled in full-day pre-K citywide, de Blasio said.

The new public school seats are part of the city's plan to increase that number to 53,000 by September.

Additional pre-K spots will be provided by community-based organizations later this spring.

Expensive. Perfume aims to capture scent of the Hudson Yards

A $200 perfume claims to have distilled the essence of Hudson Yards, under construction on Manhattan's West Side.

The fragrance is meant to celebrate spring and "fresh new beginnings," with notes of freesia, lily of the valley, pink pepper oil, peony, Bulgarian rose oil, orange flower and iris absolutes, lychee and white musk.

The perfume is the latest in a series by Bond No. 9 evoking the city, including Wall Street, Chinatown and Central Park.

But unlike those scents, the Hudson Yards fragrance honors "a new beginning that hasn't even begun yet," according to the downtown perfumery's website.

Encompassing six city blocks, Hudson Yards will ultimately include several new skyscrapers, an extension of the 7 train and 14 acres of public open space. ANNA SANDERS

Fate of NYC Picasso heads to courtroom

Masterpiece.

The painting has hung in the Four Seasons restaurant since 1959.

The question of whether a fragile Picasso painting in New York City's Four Seasons restaurant will crumble if taken down to allow repairs to the wall it hangs on went to a state court judge on Wednesday.

The dispute between the restaurant's landlord and the painting's owner takes place in a grand setting: the Seagram Building, the influential masterpiece of International Style corporate architecture designed by Mies van der Rohe.

Aby Rosen, the real estate developer who has owned the Seagram Building since 2000, wants the Picasso taken down from its prominent mount amid the rich and powerful who dine at the Four Seasons on the skyscraper's ground floor.

The 19-foot-high unframed painted theater curtain depicting figures overlooking a bullring has

Fragile art

Both sides have dispatched engineers and experts to examine the wall that the painting hangs on.

- Only those sent by Rosen have found the condition of the wall to be alarming.

- Even an art mover retained by Rosen conceded the curtain could "crack like a potato chip," the conservancy said.

Artistic landmark

"It's considered one of the loveliest interior landmarks in America and it's all worked together; it's all of a piece."

Peg Breen

hung in the hallway between two dining rooms since the restaurant's 1959 opening, earning the hallway the nickname "Picasso Alley."

Rosen contends the wall on which it hangs has been damaged by moisture and steam from the kitchens on the other side, according to papers filed with the state supreme court in Manhattan. Without repairs, the painting itself is in jeopardy, he contends.

The New York Landmarks Conservancy, the nonprofit preservationist group that owns the Picasso, argues the wall is fine and that removing the painting risked destroying it and harming the restaurant's landmarked interior.

Peg Breen, the president of the conservancy, called the painting the "iconic center" of the Four Seasons.

The conservancy, which won a temporary injunction a few days before Rosen's movers were due to arrive in February, said Rosen is exaggerating the wall's condition out of a dislike for the painting.

Pablo Picasso painted the curtain in 1919 for Sergei Diaghilev's Ballets Russes as part of his designs for the sets for the London premiere of "Le Tricorne." REUTERS

Health exchange scores 865,000 sign-ups in state

Final push.

New York saw big enrollment numbers.

Almost three out of four New York state residents who signed up for health insurance before Tuesday's deadline were uninsured when they applied.

State officials said that 70 percent of those who enrolled before March 1 had no coverage when they applied for health care through the NY State of Health exchange.

The state reported receiving 1,217,493 applications; 865,487 have already been accepted for coverage.

"Under the leadership of [Gov. Andrew] Cuomo, hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers have the peace of mind and security that come with having quality, affordable health insurance," wrote Donna Frescatore, executive director of NY State of Health.

Enrollment rush

About 39,000 New Yorkers across the state enrolled immediately ahead of the deadline, with thousands more having turned in their applications.

- The next enrollment period for coverage in 2015 begins on Nov. 15.

- Overall, the state said it is on its way to at least match its original goal of 1.1 million enrollees by the end of 2016.

A man died from a stab wound after police found him in his Brooklyn apartment on Tuesday.

Police responded to a 911 call from the Prospect-Lefferts Gardens apartment about 2:45 p.m., where they discovered Alexis Martinez, 18, with a fatal stab wound to his chest.

Emergency workers took Martinez to Kings County Hospital, where doctors pronounced him dead soon afterward.

Greenbacks. Doormen rally for pay raises

Thousands of doormen marched along one of Manhattan's wealthiest strips of luxury buildings on the Upper East Side to rally for higher wages on Wednesday, ahead of a union vote later this month to authorize a strike if their demands are not met.

In a city where housing prices have hit an all-time high, workers servicing the buildings are asking for their fair share in a new contract that protects benefits and provides pay raises that keep up with the cost of living, union officials said.

The union has not indicated how much of a pay increase it is seeking for members. Their contract is set to expire April 20.

A strike would leave residents without union doormen and building service workers. REUTERS

Senators: Report about CIA 'torture' should be public

Declassification.

The committee will ask the president to take steps.

Two members of the Senate Intelligence Committee came out on Wednesday in favor of declassifying parts of a report on the CIA's use of "enhanced interrogation" methods, saying they had concluded some detainees "were subjected to techniques that constituted torture."

The announcement by Maine Sens. Susan Collins, a Republican, and Angus King, an Independent aligned with the Democrats, was an important boost for the declassification push a day before the panel is expected to vote on the issue.

The committee had been expected to recommend the declassification of the "Findings & Conclusions" and Executive Summary from the 6,000-page report. Bipartisan support could increase the likelihood that the material will eventually become available to the public.

A congressional aide said the Senate panel will ask the White House — not the CIA itself — to declassify the report. President Barack Obama has said he wants to see a version of the report made public.

"The president is the head of the Executive Branch and, under executive order, is the ultimate decision-making authority on declassification," said the aide, who spoke on condition of anonymity. REUTERS

Shooting at Fort Hood base in Texas

Another tragedy.

In 2009, a former Army psychiatrist shot dead 13 people at the base.

A gunman opened fire at Fort Hood on Wednesday, killing multiple people and injuring a dozen or more at the U.S. Army base in central Texas that was the scene of another deadly shooting rampage in 2009, officials said.

The shooter, a male soldier, was dead of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, according to Rep. Michael McCaul of Texas in an interview with CNN. He said four people, including the gunman, were dead.

"There has been a shooting at Fort Hood and injuries are reported. Emergency crews are on the scene. No further details are known at this time," the base said in a statement.

Local news reports initially said there may have been two suspected shooters.

News of the shooting, the third such incident at a military base in the United States in about six months, was relayed to President Barack Obama, the White House said.

"We are going to get to the bottom of exactly what happened," Obama told reporters in Chicago, where he is attending fundraisers. "We're heartbroken that something like this might have happened again."

The base has been put on lockdown and police were securing its perimeter, police and military officials said. Helicopters could be seen circling the base in live TV footage broadcast from the scene.

Search for jet drags on as probe narrows to crew

Malaysian police have ruled out the involvement of any passengers in the disappearance of a jetliner, while Australian officials warned bad weather and a lack of reliable information were impeding efforts to find the plane's wreckage.

Up to 10 planes and nine ships from a half dozen countries on Wednesday scoured a stretch of the Indian Ocean roughly the size of Britain, where Flight MH370 is believed to have crashed more than three weeks ago.

Authorities have not ruled out mechanical problems as a cause of the disappearance, but say all the evidence suggests the plane was deliberately diverted from its scheduled route from Kuala Lumpur to Beijing. REUTERS

Russia could bring Ukraine incursion in 3-5 days

Russia has massed all the forces it needs on Ukraine's border if it were to decide to make an "incursion" into the country, and it could achieve its objective in three to five days, NATO's top military commander said on Wednesday.

Calling the situation "incredibly concerning," U.S. Air Force Gen. Philip Breedlove said NATO had spotted signs of movement by a very small part of the Russian force overnight but had no indication that this was part of a withdrawal to barracks.

NATO military chiefs are concerned that the estimated 40,000 Russian soldiers massed on the Ukrainian border could pose a threat to eastern and southern Ukraine. REUTERS

Competition. Amazon makes $99 Fire TV set-top box to rival Apple

Amazon.com Inc. unveiled a $99 video streaming device called Fire TV that the e-commerce company promised would be more powerful and easier to use than rival services by Apple Inc., Google Inc. and Roku.

Amazon is a latecomer to the set-top TV market that is dominated by the Apple TV. Amazon customers have a large appetite for film and TV, but many already own similar devices, analysts said.

Fire TV, which is available on Amazon.com, can access Netflix, Hulu and other providers of streaming video content. It also provides a more prominent showcase for Amazon Prime Video as well as its growing slate of original television shows and video games from Amazon Studios.

"It's the easiest place to watch Netflix,"

Amazon's vice president of Kindle, Peter Larsen, introduces the Amazon Fire TV. / GETTY IMAGES

What you get

Fire TV can predict what the user will watch and cue it up instantly, Larsen said.

- A microphone in the remote enables voice-activated search. A video game controller can be purchased for $39.99.

Amazon executive Peter Larsen said at an event in New York on Wednesday to launch the product. "You can watch 'Alpha House' and you can watch 'House of Cards.'" Amazon said it developed the device after getting feedback on its site from customers who bought other set-top boxes. REUTERS

Boston. Thousands of firefighters mourn comrade killed on job

Thousands of firefighters from across the country lined the streets of a Boston suburb Wednesday to grieve for one of two firefighters who died battling a blaze in a downtown apartment building.

In front of St. Patrick's Church in Watertown, Mass., where the funeral was held for Boston Fire Department Lt. Edward Walsh, a gigantic American flag hung from two ladder trucks assigned to local fire companies.

Walsh, 43, and his colleague Firefighter

Michael Kennedy, 33, died on March 26 while fighting a fire in a four-story apartment building in Boston's historic Back Bay neighborhood.

Seventeen firefighters were injured from among some 150 who responded. None of the tenants were hurt.

As bagpipes played dolefully, a fire truck carried Walsh's casket, draped in a Boston Fire Department flag, to and from the church.

A line of uniformed firefighters, including one with a white bandage around much of his head, saluted as the body was carried into the church.

Boston Mayor Martin Walsh and the city's Roman Catholic archbishop, Sean O'Malley, addressed mourners, including Walsh's three small children, inside the packed church. REUTERS

Out-of-town respect

Firefighters from New York, Chicago and Miami joined the procession ahead of the funeral.

- Brendan Gurry, a firefighter from Newark, N.J., said he and about nine others from his department had traveled 300 miles to attend the funeral.

- "I would travel as far as my money would take me to show respect for someone who gave the ultimate sacrifice," said Gurry, 32, who was born in Cambridge, Mass. "It's an honor thing."

Alexa Ray Joel: A bit different

Here's Alexa Ray Joel looking sultry but totally and completely different on Tuesday in New York after performing at Cafe Carlyle. It's no secret that the singer/celebrity spawn has had plastic surgery. But it's just so jarring how absolutely not like her old self she looks. Like, do her parents (Billy Joel and Christie Brinkley) ever need to be reminded of who she is when she walks in the door?

The truth about Efron's broken jaw

Zac Efron may look happy, but sources say he hides a sad, dangerous habit. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Real talk: Someone needs to help Zac Efron super fast before we all relive what happened to Cory Monteith.

Last November, Efron allegedly "slipped on a puddle of water" which was "in his home" and broke his jaw so badly it had to be wired shut.

Shady as hell? Yes. And now an insider has told In Touch that he hurt himself doing the bad stuff. "He does drugs alone," the inside source exclusively tells the mag. "It's sad."

A second insider tells In Touch: "He needs to get help before it's too late." The time is ticking down to "too late." As we reported last week, Efron had another shady altercation with his "bodyguard" and some homeless men near Skid Row in Los Angeles.

Efron "threw a bottle out of the car," which scared some homeless people milling around. Tensions escalated, with the star reportedly taking a punch to the mouth.

Right. That sounds exactly like something that would happen to anybody anywhere and not a drug deal gone bad. Exactly.

Michael Strahan joins 'Good Morning America'

What a week for "Good Morning America." On Sunday, it was announced that co-anchor Josh Elliot was leaving. And yesterday, it was known that Michael Strahan will be stepping in to the 8:00 hour of "GMA," three to four times a week. Fans of his gig on "Live! With Kelly and Michael" shouldn't worry, though — he's going to be doing both.

Where does Bran start out in Season 4?

This season is Bran exploring his mystical side. In Season 3 we had him starting to understand his powers, especially with the introduction of Jojen Reed [Thomas Brodie-Sangster], a mentor to Bran. And in Season 4, he's getting taught more by Jojen, but there is this supernatural force that's pulling him.

Bran has some powerful abilities. Is he excited about them, or is he apprehensive?

In Season 3, when he takes control of [his guardian giant] Hodor, it's a definite, "Whoa, is that acceptable?" Taking control of another human is a huge responsibility bestowed upon him to use it for good and not evil, and not turn into Joffrey with it.

How far will his powers grow — could he maybe

But it's Insight Editions' grown-up take on a children's classic that will really impress. "Game of Thrones: A Pop-Up Guide to Westeros" brings the show's Emmy-winning credits to life with astonishingly intricate 3-D models of five key locations from the series.

Romance

You've been dating Brazilian model Hermann Nicoli for a few years now. Was it love at first sight?

It was kind of love or desire at first sight. I was living between Milan, London and Paris and I met him at a party in Milan very briefly. Then I was in Paris a year later during men's fashion week, when I was staying in a little apartment hotel in Paris, and we met in the lobby, and that's where we hit it off.

Did he approach you?

We both have different stories, but I kind of approached him, that's the funny thing. I had just come out of a relationship that wasn't working and pretty soon after that I met him ... and the rest is history.

CANDICE SWANEPOEL

She doesn't need that $10 million Victoria's Secret bra to feel sexy.

'GOING COMMANDO ALWAYS WORKS'

In addition to Candice Swanepoel's career on the catwalk circuit, you'll recognize her as the girl who wowed the world in the $10 million Fantasy Bra at the Victoria's Secret show. We caught up with Swanepoel and chatted about feeling sexy — from the inside out.

You've spent a lot of time being photographed in lingerie. Am I right in thinking that this is how you hang out at home?

Um, no. I must admit that I have a great collection of lingerie, but at home I try to find the most comfortable thing to wear.

So, Bridget Jones-style granny panties?

No, no, no, definitely not. You can find comfy lingerie like boy shorts, briefs — and commando always works!

Always nice to be naked.

Has going blonde changed your attitude?

Hair color is like fragrance or lingerie: It brings something different out of you.

You're a ballet dancer, so do you like expressing your sexuality through dance?

Yeah. Growing up doing ballet makes you a lot more aware of how to move your body. Dance is a big part of the way we communicate with people, the way we feel about ourselves. When you're out and dancing you're showing people a part of yourself.

Head to ModMods.com to read our bonus questions.

RICHARD PECKETT
richard.peckett@metro.us

Role play

Should lingerie create a fantasy?

Yeah. There are so many different styles that all play a different role: Body by Victoria's Secret is very relaxed and there's a sexy line that's playful with color, garter belts and babydolls.

Which is your favorite style and why?

I stick to sultry black lace, garter belts and subtle styles.

Celeb spotlight. Are Justin Bieber and Selena Gomez totally toxic?

First there was Bennifer, then there was Brangelina and today there is Jelena. Justin Bieber, 20, and Selena Gomez, 21, make up one of the world's most talked-about on-and-off couples (Chris Brown and Rihanna make up the other). But are they simply two lovebirds having a young, flighty romance or is their relationship more dangerous than that? We asked Dr. Sherrie Campbell, psychologist and author of "Loving Yourself: The Mastery of Being Your Own Person," about why she thinks their relationship looks like toxic trouble.

See more at www.metro.us

Justin Bieber and Selena Gomez share a kiss in 2012. / GETTY IMAGES

Is this kind of toxic relationship more common with young people?

It happens with all people. This is your typical codependent relationship. I see it daily. There are some people who end up there for a lifetime, but I don't think Selena will do that.

Do you think Bieber will change?
I think he can have a comeback, but he's not out of the woods yet.

Is he a narcissist?
Yes — 100 percent. But if you give a guy that kind of money and parents who smoke pot with him on the plane you really have a problem. I do think he worked really hard prior to what we see now [to get where] he wanted to be, but he's lost total sight

Toxicity

What are some traits of a toxic relationship?

One person is dominant and one is passive. Justin is dominant and has all the control. It's typically the male and the woman waits around clinging onto any hope that he'll be with her. I see this in domestic violence cases all the time, where the woman is staying and afraid to go and she thinks he's going to change. People can hold onto this for years and years.

of the love of music. He's obsessed with himself at this point.

What causes that behavior?

A lack of family structure. Parents get involved in the business and make their kid the business, and then the kid has too much authority and way too much money. Also, the people [celebrities] surround themselves with also have a lot to do with who they become. People in Hollywood aren't always making the best decisions about who can support them. Selena says everyone's telling her who to be, but she just wants to be herself. She doesn't want to be all of these people. ANDREA PARK

ONLINE DATING DOESN'T HAVE TO BE THE WORST

No one likes rejection. If you are single, you may want to meet people to hang out, kiss, have casual sex or to otherwise get romantically involved. It can be frustrating if you can't get enough replies — or worse yet: responses that make you wish you could grab a can of Raid to get rid of the creeps. Fret not. Better online dates are within your reach.

Let this research give you hope that you will meet someone. The U.S. Census Bureau says there are 103 million unmarried American adults. Almost half that total are singles — 44 percent — which means there is more than enough nookie to go around. Hell, if you are interested dating nonmonogamous couples too, your field of eligibles just got even bigger.

According to Pew Research Internet Project, 38 percent of people who are currently "single and looking" have used online dating sites or mobile hookup apps and more than 23 percent of online daters said they clicked or swiped to find their current spouse or long-term partner. With numbers like these, finding your right mate is just a matter of time. Be patient.

Whether you look for lust on Match, Adam4Adam, Tinder, BlackPeopleMeet, JDate or any of the myriad apps and dating spaces out there, these tips will help you write a profile that makes people notice.

- DO focus on what you want, not what you don't want. Instead of saying "don't bother writing me if [fill in the blank]," explain who should write you, what you are looking for and what kinds of fun you want to have with potential partners.
- DON'T limit yourself. Online dating offers a wonderful opportunity to explore new territory. Go younger or Indulgence. Is this $250 burger from Beer & Buns worth its price?

When we found out that Beer & Buns — a new Murray Hill restaurant in the St. Giles Premier Hotel — had a $250 burger on the menu, we did our intrepid work as journalists to taste-test it for you.

The Indulgence Burger is, well, a delicious indulgence.

Chef Wisit Panpinyo first creates the ground beef from a Kobe steak of ribeye and sirloin. On a housemade sourdough bun, he layers foie gras, caviar and secret sauce, and a slice of heirloom tomato and microgreens. Adding pancetta is optional. Bonus: Your order comes with a T-shirt, fries, a side dish and beer.

There's no cheese on the burger, but none's needed — "it's melty enough," said one reviewer at our table. Indeed, the patty stands up on its own: "You can taste that the meat is quality," added another. Even our vegetarian critic was impressed — after 17 years without meat, this was the best possible comeback bite. After this, it's all downhill for her.

The Indulgence Burger: It comes with a T-shirt, too.
BEER & BUNS

Our tasters' only critique (if that) was about the foie gras. Granted, foie gras isn't for everyone, so the appearance of some on your burger might be off-putting. It adds flavor, but the dish is fine without it.

If you want to order the Indulgence Burger, you have to give the restaurant a day's notice so Chef Panpinyo can gather the ingredients. So far only a couple have been sold, he told us on Friday, but with dinner service starting this week, he's thinking that number will go up.

So, worth it? Maybe. It tastes pretty divine, and considering that this burger was originally set to cost $1,000, $250 appears to be a bargain. But to us, $100 would seem like a fairer price tag.

If you're in the market for something a little less expensive, the restaurant also has a number of sliders that are tasty — maybe not as tasty as a $250 burger, but really, what is?

Americans want care, not highway robbery

Re: 'We need care, not insurance' (Metro, April 2) Maria Termini hit the nail on the head. We need a system where insurance companies don't siphon off 20 percent of the money we spend on health care — and then have the nerve to complain because it's not their normal 30 percent. And they probably get to deduct their lobbying efforts from the base cost while making life miserable for sick people. They should be restricted to making money off people who can afford to give it away. Sell them those Cadillac policies. Expanding Medicare is one way to go.

Maria is right: We need health care, not insurance.
JOHN LASELL, VIA EMAIL

Letter writer Maria Termini is so correct, the high cost associated with today's health insurance still makes it unaffordable for most people. I don't care how low the premium is, should you have a procedure done, your co-pay and deductible will be as much as $600. So people who could not afford insurance before, because it cost too much, will be upset when they find out that if you want to use it, it will cost more in co-pays than your premium every month.

FANTASY

ADAM LEVITAN, LIVING THE FANTASY

METRO'S FANTASY GURU BREAKS IT ALL DOWN.

NFL news

The Broncos made zero effort to re-sign Knowshon Moreno. It speaks volumes about their faith in Montee Ball, who is a strong candidate for 300 touches.

MR. JACKSON GOES TO WASHINGTON

DeSean Jackson may or may not be a gangster. But he's certainly a dynamic football player.

Since 2008, Jackson has led the NFL in receptions of at least 40 yards and is third in yards per reception. Last season, he was ninth in receiving yards (1,332), 19th in catches (82) and 14th in touchdowns (nine). His departure from Philadelphia and arrival in Washington creates a massive ripple effect in the fantasy world.

Jackson will get a chance to torment his former team.
GETTY IMAGES

because of Jackson's ability to stretch defenses. It will open up the middle of the field for Pierre Garcon and Jordan Reed, two dynamic playmakers in their own right. Meanwhile, Eagles QB Nick Foles' stock sinks as he has two major question marks in Riley Cooper (ability) and Jeremy Maclin (health).

The man himself

It would be a shock if Jackson is able to duplicate his 2013 numbers in his first season with the Redskins. Garcon led the NFL in targets last season with a whopping 184, firmly establishing himself as Griffin's go-to guy. New offensive coordinator Sean McVay reportedly "loves" Reed as his move tight end, as he should. It's going to leave Jackson hovering around 1,000 yards, not up at the 1,300 mark.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author.

Up and down

Robert Griffin III was already going to be a monster bounce-back candidate thanks to the healing of his knee and the arrival of pass-happy head coach Jay Gruden, formerly offensive coordinator for Cincinnati. Now he has top-5 QB upside

NBA pickups

Time to scour the waiver wire for these players:

- Matt Barnes, SF, Clippers — Both Blake Griffin and Jamal Crawford are banged up, giving Barnes the green light.

- Omer Asik, C, Rockets — This guy is a double-double waiting to happen anytime Dwight Howard (ankle) sits. And Howard has been doing a lot of resting in the last few weeks.

- Chris Kaman, C, Lakers — At long last, head coach Mike D'Antoni — just as he may be on his way out of Los Angeles — is playing Kaman and Pau Gasol together in the starting lineup.

Giants sign Ayers

The Giants signed Robert Ayers to add some depth to their defensive line Wednesday as they try to return to their place as a dominant unit. Ayers, 28, had 5 1/2 sacks for Denver in 2013. New York finished 25th in total sacks last year.
